Why does corporate America fly there private jets to Tony Jeary's Success Acceleration Studio? Because top-level executives and CEOs realize that the difference between "good" and "great" presentation skills can exponentially affect their levels of success, personally and professionally. These influences no longer wish to dwell in the land of good - they seek to be among the great.

Known as Mr. Presentation™, Jeary helps individuals and organizations effectively execute and achieve results through both presentation mastery and strategic effectiveness. He personally coaches the presidents and CEOs of Fortune 500 corporations such as Sam's Club, Wal-Mart, Ford Motor Company and New York Life.

"Examining subtle details in your listener and getting in sync with their moves can improve your chances of reaching them."

SELF-HELP

Jeary, a speaking coach to big-business CEO's, adapts his formula for the general public, persuasively showing that life is, indeed, a series of presentations by which we work "to change the contents of another person's mind at a particular time and place." More a skill than a talent, speaking, he says, requires techniques (e.g., know your audience, overcome anxiety), which are illustrated with well-placed and practical examples. Instead of dominating or manipulating others, presenters should simply pursue desired outcomes with confidence. Novel, well written, and heartily recommended, . . .
